Do You Have a Logistics Story to Tell?

If your story relates directly to the professional interests of the Army logistics workforce—officer, noncommissioned officer, or civilian and preferably all three—we'd like you to tell it in Army Logistician magazine. Here are a few hints that will help you produce an "acceptable" manuscript—

- Write in a straightforward, logically sequenced expository style, using the active voice, with a minimum of slang and acronyms.

- Pack your article with facts and focus on the information content, not on the organization or on individuals.

- Treatment of your subject should be broad enough to attract general reader interest at various levels of the Army logistics structure, and should be detailed and specific enough to convey a clear and distinct understanding of your subject by those readers who may not be familiar with it.

- The best "style guide" to follow in writing for publication in Army Logistician is the back issues of the magazine.

- Remember Army Logistician is an official Department of the Army periodical and, as such, provides information on U.S. Army logistics plans, policies, doctrine, procedures, operations, and developments to the Active Army, Army National Guard, U.S. Army Reserve, civilian employees of the Army, and to the public.

- Your story can be a news item, a short feature, or a full length feature article. News items may be 100 words or less. Length of feature articles may range from as few as 500 words (about 2 doublespaced, typewritten pages) to as many as 3,000 words (about 12 doublespaced, typewritten pages).

- Rough sketches, charts, diagrams, or good quality black-and-white or color photographs to illustrate the major points of your article are most important. Include with your manuscript a short, five or six line biographical sketch. All articles accepted for publication are subject to clearance through appropriate information channels and need not be cleared before submission. You may wish to query us about the subject before you write your feature article. Direct communication with the Editor, Army Logistician magazine, is authorized by Department of the Army and the Army Materiel Command.

News items are solicited, and news "leads" may be telephoned to the news department by dialing AUTOVON 687-4585 or 687-6742. Feature article information may be obtained by calling AUTOVON 687-5846.

Magazine space is, of course, limited; but there is always room for the really good logistics article, and it may just be the one you've been planning to write!
